

All you need to know about the Uluru Statement from the Heart

What is the Uluru Statement from the Heart?

It is an invitation from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples to all Australians to 'walk with us in a movement for a better future'. It seeks to ensure that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples are acknowledged and listened to at the decision-making tables and in all law-making processes.

Voice Treaty Truth

There are three core components to the Uluru Statement From the Heart: Voice, Treaty and Truth.

Voice refers to a First Nations Voice, guaranteed by the Constitution, to provide a permanent platform for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander voices to be heard by Parliament. Its role is to amplify the voice of First Nations opinions, enshrined in the constitution through a referendum (although not legally binding).

A Treaty is an agreement between First Nations peoples and State and Federal Governments of Australia. The call for Treaty aims to set in motion both national acknowledgement of, and legal protection for, the rights and interests of First Nations peoples. A number of state Treaty processes are already underway. Australia is the only Commonwealth nation yet to sign a treaty with First Nations peoples.

Truth telling: Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples have long called for a comprehensive process of truth telling about Australia's history that acknowledges both the periods of colonial conflict and dispossession and the strength and resilience of First Nations peoples and cultures.

All you need to know about the Uluru Statement from the Heart

How was the Uluru Statement from the Heart created?

Hundreds of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples agreed on the Uluru Statement in May 2017 at Uluru after thirteen sessions of dialogue across the country, each made up of approximately 100 representatives from local Traditional Owners, First Nations leaders and community-based organisations.

What's happening now?

Five years on from the creation of the Uluru Statement in 2017, in August 2022 the federal government committed to a Referendum. Before the end of the Financial Year 2023/24, the Australian people will be asked to enshrine an Indigenous Voice in the Constitution.

Why does a First Nations Voice need to be protected by the Constitution?

A constitutionally protected Voice to Parliament will ensure that it cannot be abolished by governments if their priorities change or they don't like its advice. A constitutional Voice will deliver the authority and certainty required for a durable First Nations Voice on laws and policies that affect them. Government has suggested a legislated Voice, but this is not in line with the wishes of Australia's First Nations peoples.

What can you do?

Here are five ways you can show your support of the Uluru Statement From the Heart:

1. Vote yes in the Referendum to enshrine an Indigenous Voice in the Constitution.
2. Sign your name at ulurustatement.org and Fromtheheart.com.au
3. Read Everything You Need to Know about the Uluru Statement from the Heart by Megan Davis and George Williams or Finding Our Heart by Thomas Mayor (suitable for kids!)

4. Ask your workplace, sporting or other club or association to endorse the Uluru Statement from the Heart and share this support publicly
5. Hold an event raising awareness about the Uluru Statement.