

OUR COMMITMENT TO THE 5 DIMENSIONS OF RECONCILIATION

RACE RELATIONS

Reconciliation NSW strives to create a better and fairer society through the elimination of racism. We run campaigns, programs, and events to educate and engage communities, organisations and schools in anti-racism practices.

Our annual community event 'I'm not racist but...' is a fun and interesting night that gets the community talking about race and racism. Our strategy is to prompt deeper conversations because to fight racism in this country, we need to be better at talking about it.

EQUALITY AND EQUITY

At Reconciliation NSW we support self-determination through the amplification of First Nations voices. We use our platforms to share First Nations events and products and to encourage non-Indigenous people to learn more about First Nations histories and cultures through engaging with First Nations content.

UNITY

Through education in schools, organisations and the community, Reconciliation NSW supports the embedding of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander perspectives. Our Pathways to Reconciliation program works with local Elders and cultural educators to teach schools about First Nations cultures – giving them the tools to progress as leaders in reconciliation.

Beyond the school setting, our website offers a range of toolkits and factsheets to educate non-Indigenous Australia on our shared histories. We are strong supporters and advocates for a First Nations voice to parliament and use our position in the community to have important conversations about the Uluru Statement from the Heart.

HISTORICAL ACCEPTANCE

Without acknowledgement and acceptance of the past, we cannot move forward as a unified nation. Reconciliation NSW amplifies the voices of Indigenous peoples when dealing with the trauma of historical wrongs. We seek to provide contextual information for non-Indigenous Australians on the social, political, and economic framework of this country.

Through our strategic programs and events, we work to create a state that has widespread understanding of the importance of reconciliation through self-determination.

INSTITUTIONAL INTEGRITY

We provide support to all our organisational members who are striving to excel in the 5 dimensions of reconciliation. Through a tailored organisational membership, we ensure businesses are operating with transparency and integrity in the reconciliation process.

We also partner with NSW Parliament and local governments to capitalise on institutional support of reconciliation and ensure the core values of reconciliation are understood by our leaders.
