

HOW CAN MY WORKPLACE SUPPORT RECONCILIATION?

Reconciliation requires us all to Be a Voice for Generations.

This year for National Reconciliation Week, we invite you to use your voice and create change for future generations. Find out below for how your workplace can learn, act and share to progress the movement towards a reconciled and equitable Australia.

Learn

- Learn what Country your organisation stands on, who the Traditional Owners are and their culture.
- Develop a reading and video library of resources for your employees (this book list is a good place to start).
- Book Cultural Competency Training for your staff don't forget to involve your volunteers in your activities and training.
- Learn about casual racism and structural privilege in your workplace start by reading this report.
- Start a conversation with Reconciliation Australia about what developing a RAP could mean for your business.

Act

- Have an Acknowledgement of Country at the beginning of meetings, important events, on your website and in your email signatures.
- Display Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander flags, maps and significant dates at work.
- Consider Supply Nation for everything from office supplies to catering.
- Commit to developing a RAP.
- Subscribe to Koori Mail for your lunchroom it is full of great articles and inspiring stories.
- Hold events for NAIDOC week, National Reconciliation Week, National Sorry Day.
- Become a member of your State Reconciliation Peak Body. In NSW register here

Share

- Share information on the upcoming referendum for an Indigenous voice to parliament with your staff.
- Share what you're doing to support reconciliation on your social media pages.
- Contact other businesses to discuss the RAP journey and see how you can work together.
- Share with your board and key stakeholders what they can do to promote reconciliation.
- Provide opportunities for staff to learn and share together e.g. book clubs, film clubs, learning circles.

Supporters, please remember the importance of privileging and amplifying First Nations' voices as you add your voice to calls for reconciliation and justice.
